

"Seriously Maude, there has to be a better way to judge how loans perform."

Until now, judging the future performance of a mortgage loan has been about as scientific as auditions for a popular TV show. But, thanks to Interthinx®, all that is about to change, radically! As the first company with the technology to predict how well a single loan or pool of loans will perform, Interthinx has created a system that incorporates real time performance data with statistics and heuristics. Based on complex algorithms using credit data, past mortgage fraud histories, proprietary data and application data history, decisions can be made pre-funding. The system can also factor in each lender's risk tolerance, which enables performance data solutions to be customized based on a lender's profile. It's an innovative new approach that promises to take risk mitigation from detection to prediction and ultimately prevention.
